Comments to the Author
Thanks for the responses, and the paper quality improves.
However, there are still a lot of typos and formats (even in the newly updated parts) needs to be carefully dealt with before publishing. Otherwise, I don't think the quality is good enough as a journal paper of KSII Transaction for public access.

The followings are just a small part of the obvious errors, typos and wrong formats.

(1) SNR should be signal-to-noise-ratio, instead of signal noise ratio.

(2) There should be a comma after "Finally" each time.

(3) The reference format is still very badly listed, and is unacceptable. Please use the same rule for putting authors' names. For example, for all the references, I suggest to put first name first and last name last. Keep the same format consistently for all.

If you prefer putting last name first and first name last, don't forget to use a comma. Don't forget to use "." to stand for first name abbreviation. For example, it should be "Wang, J." for reference [5] instead of "Wang J". Similarly, it should be "Ma, X., Gao, Q., Marojevic, V., and Reed, Jeffrey,..." for reference [8] instead of the wrong format.

Double check the format rules of this journal to see when you can use "et al" for multiple authors for each reference.

There are tens of errors like these.

In one word, go through the format rule for references carefully, and make sure there's no error here.

(4) Make sure the citations in the main body is correct, and use the past tense for existing works consistently. It should be "Ma et al [8] implemented" instead of "Xiaofu [8] implements"; It should be "Zhang et al" instead of "Xinyu Zhang". It should be "In [18], the authors proposed ..." instead of "In [18], it proposes an ...". It should be "In [8], the authors developed ..." instead of "In [8], it develop ...".

There are more, please check.

(5) Polish the language and make sure it is fluent without weird expressions.
